

Mayla is a junior at U-32 high school. She is a co-leader of two of her school's activism clubs, Seeking Social Justice and Green Team, as well as a co-founder of the new activist organization HERVermont. She loves theater and plays ultimate frisbee, and she has participated in National Novel Writing Month for two years in a row. In her free time she likes going outside, playing cello, listening to music, reading books, writing stories, hanging out with friends and family, and being in libraries. She is very passionate about social justice issues, especially gender equality and environmental activism. She is part of her school's independent learning program, the Pilot program, where she has had the opportunity to explore many interesting subjects including hidden and untold histories of the United States, which inspired her Voice of Democracy essay.
